Abstract The authors report on a study of the effects of a 12-week, 12-session, self-help, cognitive-behavioral program on the self-efficacy and self-esteem of 100 adolescents with a history of sexual abuse. The program was designed to help adolescents develop a positive self-image and a sense of control over their lives. The results of the study showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the self-efficacy and self-esteem of the adolescents. The authors discuss the implications of these findings for the development of self-help programs for adolescents with a history of sexual abuse.
