The Chaff And The Grain:

Early American Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases Bartlett Jere Whiting, 1977 p B J Whiting savors proverbial expressions and has devoted much of his lifetime to studying and collecting them no one knows more about British and American proverbs than he The present volume based upon writings in British North America from the earliest settlements to approximately 1820 complements his and Archer Taylor s Dictionary of American Proverbs and Proverbial Phrases 1820 1880 It differs from that work and from other standard collections however in that its sources are primarily not literary but instead workaday writings letters diaries histories travel books political pamphlets and the like The authors represent a wide cross section of the populace from scholars and statesmen to farmers shopkeepers sailors and hunters Mr Whiting has combed all the obvious sources and hundreds of out of the way publications of local journals and historical societies This body of material because it covers territory that has not been extracted and compiled in a scholarly way before can justly be said to be the most valuable of all those that Whiting has brought together according to Albert B Friedman What makes the work important is Whiting s authority a proverb or proverbial phrase is what BJW thinks is a proverb or proverbial phrase There is no objective operative definition of any value no divining rod his tact feel experience determine what s the real thing and what is spurious

Patent Office, 1909 Plant Inventory, 1918 Michigan Farmer, 1857 Origins of Agriculture in Western Central Asia David R. Harris, 2011-09-01 In Origins of Agriculture in Western Central Asia archaeologist David R Harris addresses questions of when how and why agriculture and settled village life began east of the Caspian Sea The book describes and assesses evidence from archaeological investigations in Turkmenistan and adjacent parts of Iran Uzbekistan and Afghanistan in relation to present and past environmental conditions and genetic and archaeological data on the ancestry of the crops and domestic animals of the Neolithic period It includes accounts of previous research on the prehistoric archaeology of the region and reports the results of a recent environmental archaeological project undertaken by British Russian and Turkmen archaeologists in Turkmenistan principally at the early Neolithic site of Jeitun Djeitun on the southern edge of the Karakum desert This project has demonstrated unequivocally that agropastoralists who cultivated barley and wheat raised goats and sheep hunted wild animals made stone tools and pottery and lived in small mudbrick settlements were present in southern Turkmenistan by 7 000 years ago c 6 000 BCE calibrated where they came into contact with hunter gatherers of the Keltiminar Culture It is possible that barley and goats were domesticated locally but the available archaeological and genetic evidence leads to the conclusion that all or most of the elements of the Neolithic

Jeitun Culture spread to the region from farther west by a process of demic or cultural diffusion that broadly parallels the spread of Neolithic agropastoralism from southwest Asia into Europe By synthesizing for the first time what is currently known about the origins of agriculture in a large part of Central Asia between the more fully investigated regions of southwest Asia and China this book makes a unique contribution to the worldwide literature on transitions from hunting and gathering to agriculture Special Bulletin ... Michigan State University.
