

The Crucible- Act 1

1. Who can we trust? Select three characters and explain why we can or can not trust them.

Throughout the first act of the play, the author/ director convinces the audience to trust certain characters through their dialog, actions and status in society. Characters we believe to represent a rational moral compass are Hale and Nurse Rebecca. Hale is represented as an intelligent figure of authority in the play, and looks for the logical reasoning amongst fallacious Puritan theocracy. Nurse Rebecca ultimately buys or trust through her position/ title as we are instilled to listen to figures of medicine, as well as older people that are wise and full of experience. Rebecca tells the audience she has 11 children and 26 grandchildren, leading her to believe she knows when a child is playing silly. Rebecca brings about a presence of peace and good judgement to the village, and guides the adults to look for sensible alternate options. We learn from the very start of the play, that we cannot trust Parris, as he is more concerned with his reputation and is heavily self-absorbed. In Parris' dialogue, his heavy use of the possessive adjective, "my" conveys his selfish nature and need for self-preservation.

2. Provide three sentences explaining what Miller wants the audience to learn/think/know as a result of his portrayal of Act 1.

Act one provides the audience with an understanding of the constant fear and tension that has built up over the many years, leading to resentment. Miller has conveyed the major importance of power dynamics within the puritan society, and how a shift in this structure causes the powerless to be impowered. Miller teaches us the need for self-preservation, with each characters having their different motives and threats behind their actions.

Extended Response

To what extent does the exploration of human experience in The Crucible invite you to reconsider your understanding of fear?

Compose an introduction and one PETAL paragraph in response to the question above. You are only required to discuss Act 1 of the play.

The human experience of fear is a powerful natural human emotion, that allows us to feel the presence of danger and threat of harm. Different experiences allow us to create opinions and morals that influence the way we see fear. The Play The crucible, by Arthur miller, explores the chilling parallel of the Salem witch hunts in Massachusetts, 1692. The Play effectively conveys the fear, hysteria and power, experienced during the time of puritan theocracy. By exploring diverse ways in which authority is asserted in the play, when learn that fear can be used to manipulate and control others.
