

IN CONGRESS. JULY 4, 1776.

Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, in such a case, would dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that even the most arduous struggle for Liberty may be necessary to bring men to the full sense of their rights.

But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their duty, when a prudent consideration of the consequences shall render it imprudent to acquiesce, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — That such is the natural and just right of the People to alter or to abolish any Form of Government, in order to lay a new Foundation for their Liberty and Security, is an undeniable Truth, which no Government is at liberty to deny.

That the United States, by the Declaration of Independence, have declared their adherence to the Principles and the Rights of the People, is a Truth which no Government is at liberty to deny.
