Abstract

On 12 October 2000, the Journal of the American Medical Association published a letter from the American Medical Association (AMA) to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regarding the proposed regulation of off-in-label uses of pharmaceuticals. The letter stated that the AMA was concerned that the proposed regulation would "impose a significant burden on the medical profession and on patients" and that it would "interfere with the ability of physicians to provide the best care for their patients."
