

How Fast Is Language Learning?

Yves Rogier (standing) explains to a fascinated group of eager students the ways to make use of language theories. They examine a text together, comparing their notes to those of the second language in order to find better examples. He also conducted a seminar on the importance of the teaching and learning of language with others as a higher level (bachelor's course) specialisation and then supervised teaching in the high school and college levels. "Yves Rogier is a language officer at the university and is in charge of the teaching, supervision and academic supervision. The programme allows you to specialise in this area, which is very important for the rest of your career."
