Bulletin of the International Railway Congress Association [English Edition] International Railway Congress Association, 1905 The Kagero Diary, 2020-08-06 Japan is the only country in the world where women writers laid the foundations of classical literature The Kagero Diary commands our attention as the first extant work of that rich and brilliant tradition The author known to posterity as Michitsuna's Mother a member of the middle ranking aristocracy of the Heian period 794-1185 wrote an account of 20 years of her life from 954-74 and this autobiographical text now gives readers access to a woman's experience of a thousand years ago The diary centers on the author's relationship with her husband Fujiwara Kaneie her kinsman from a more powerful and prestigious branch of the family than her own Their marriage ended in divorce and one of the author's intentions seems to have been to write an anti-romance one that could be subtitled I married the prince but we did not live happily ever after Yet particularly in the first part of the diary Michitsuna's Mother is drawn to record those events and moments when the marriage did live up to a romantic ideal fostered by the Japanese tradition of love poetry At the same time she also seems to seek the freedom to live and write outside the romance myth and without a husband Since the author was by inclination and talent a poet and lived in a time when poetry was a part of everyday social intercourse her account of her life is shaped by a lyrical consciousness The poems she records are crystalline moments of awareness that vividly recall the past This new translation of the Kagero Diary conveys the long fluid sentences the complex polyphony of voices and the floating temporality of the original It also pays careful attention to the poems of the text rendering as much as possible their complex imagery and open-ended quality The translation is accompanied by running notes on facing pages and an introduction that places the work within the context of contemporary discussions regarding feminist literature and the genre of autobiography and provides detailed historical information and a description of the stylistic qualities of the text

background of Elizabeth Rynecki's life when she was growing up. But the art transformed from familiar to extraordinary in her eyes after her grandfather Moshe's son George left behind journals detailing the loss her ancestors had endured during World War II including Moshe's art. Knowing that her family had only found a small portion of Moshe's art and that many more pieces remained to be found, Elizabeth set out to find them. Before Moshe was deported to the ghetto, he entrusted his work to friends who would keep it safe. After he was killed in the Majdanek concentration camp, the art was dispersed all over the world. With the help of historians, curators, and admirers of Moshe's work, Elizabeth began the incredible and difficult task of rebuilding his collection. Spanning three decades of Elizabeth's life and three generations of her family, this touching memoir is a compelling narrative of the richness of one man's art, the devastation of war, and one woman's unexpected path to healing. Motor Traction, 1910 Trains and Technology: Track and structures Anthony J. Scientific American, 1896 The American Discovery of the Norse Erik Ingvar Thurin, 1999 The interest of a group of American writers in the Norse Viking Age Scandinavians began to develop in the late 1830s, reaching its high point at mid-century and tapering off after the Civil War as the members of the group neared the end of their careers. Only one of the authors discussed, Julia Clinton Jones, joins the club at the end of the period. This period, defined as the original phase of the American discovery of the Norse, features two essayists, Emerson and Thoreau, who refer to the Norse in writing on a variety of topics. Fiction is represented by Melville alone. American writers of fiction like Stowe and Hawthorne shun the Norse. Neither the essayists nor Melville uses Norse themes as their primary subject; that is reserved for the poets Lowell, Whittier, Taylor, Longfellow, and Julia Clinton Jones. BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America, Inc.
