

The background of the cover features a dark, high-contrast image of a violin, shown from a side profile. The body of the violin is a deep, dark wood, while the f-hole and the bridge are highlighted in a lighter, almost white color. Overlaid on the violin and the dark background are several thin, white geometric lines. These lines form various shapes, including circles, triangles, and rectangles, some of which are interconnected to create a complex, web-like pattern. The overall aesthetic is one of precision and mathematical elegance, reflecting the subject of the book, calculus.
