

TASK 1: PLANNING COMMENTARY

Respond to the prompts below (no more than 8 single-spaced pages, including prompts) by typing your responses within the brackets. Do not delete or alter the prompts. Pages exceeding the maximum will not be scored.

1. Central Focus

- a. Describe the central focus and purpose of the content you will teach in the learning segment.

[At the end of our unit on To Kill a Mockingbird, my cooperating teacher planned a Socratic Seminar. For this summative assessment, students will be assigned one of the following topics for discussion: Childhood & Innocence, Education & Learning, Racism & Prejudice, Courage, and Justice. Students will be assessed based on their ability to facilitate and contribute to a 15-minute peer discussion on their assigned topic. Additionally, students will be asked to assess their own performance and those of their assigned peers. During the Socratic Seminar, students will ask their groups members a series of open-ended questions, and peers will respond to such questions using evidence from the text, supplementary materials (documentary "Long Shot," film "Just Mercy," Scottsboro boys trials), and personal experiences to support their claims. Prior to their Socratic Seminars, students will meet in their assigned groups to come up with questions, find textual evidence that relates to their topic, and more.

Given that the summative evaluation for this To Kill a Mockingbird unit is for students to explain how a specific topic emerges throughout the course of the text and use textual evidence to support their claims, this learning segment requires students to update their characterizations by analyzing select language and events in Chapters 9-15 of To Kill a Mockingbird. Students will analyze these passages and events through specific lenses and theories to determine what these elements reveal about the characters and the people of Maycomb; students are expected to support their answers with textual evidence.

This learning segment covers chapters 9-15 of To Kill a Mockingbird, and I employ a variety of strategies to promote accurate reading comprehension and analysis. These strategies include introducing academic vocabulary and establishing appropriate context; analyzing how language is used via guided analysis, guided discussion, and written analysis; scaffolding content from easy to hard to gradually prepare students for independent practice; informal and formal assessments opportunities through a variety of methods; and verbal and written feedback in real-time and post-lesson. The goal of this learning segment is for students to accurately recall and articulate events from the text, explain evolving characterizations, and use textual evidence to support their claims and observations.]

- b. Provide the title, author (or, if a film, the director), and a short description (about a paragraph in length) of salient features of the text(s) that a reviewer of your evidence, who is unfamiliar with the text(s), needs to know in order to understand your instruction. If there is more than one text, indicate the lesson(s) where each text will be the focus.
