Secondary Preventive Nutrition Adrienne Bendich,Richard J. Deckelbaum,2000-11-29 The Nutrition and Health series has been very fortunate to have each of the volumes recognized by rating services such as Doody's as valuable contributions for health professionals and individuals interested in the most up to date and balanced information from the experts in nutrition These independent accolades may have occurred because the Nutrition and Health series has as its overriding mission to provide health professionals with texts that are considered essential because each book includes 1 a synthesis of the state of the science 2 timely in depth reviews by the leading researchers in their respective fields 3 extensive up to date fully annotated reference lists 4 a detailed index 5 relevant tables and figures 6 identification of paradigm shifts and the consequences 7 virtually no overlap of information between chapters but targeted inter chapter referrals 8 suggestions of areas for future research and 9 balanced data driven answers to patient questions which are based upon the totality of evidence rather than the findings of any single study The series volumes are not the outcome of a symposium Rather each editor has the potential to examine a chosen area with a broad perspective both in subject matter as well as in the choice of chapter authors The international perspective especially with regard to public health initiatives is emphasized where appropriate respiration phagocytic activity and cyclooxygenase activation are all essential processes of life which also generate oxidative species In humans chronic oxidative stress often coupled with deficiency of antioxidant defenses is associated with the aging process and can lead to the development of disorders such as cancer and arterial disease Major cardiovascular conditions in which oxidative damage has been strongly implicated include atherosclerosis myocardial ischemia and reperfusion coronary restenosis and congestive heart failure Compelling evidence points to oxidative stress as an important trigger in the complex chain of events leading to atherosclerosis The expression of chemotactic factors and adhesion molecules is modified by oxidative stress Exposure to superoxide ions activates the NF kappa B regulatory complex and triggers the transcription of several atherosclerosis related genes These events lead to the accumulation of macrophages in the arterial wall Macrophages avidly incorporate oxidized low density lipoproteins LDL to form foam cells The activity of matrix metalloproteinases is also regulated by oxidative stress This activity appears to be closely coupled with smooth muscle cell activation and migration Matrix metalloproteinases have also been implicated in the pathophysiology of plaque rupture Antioxidant supplementation including vitamin E decreases susceptibility of LDL to oxidation and retards the progression of atherosclerosis in animal models
