

Circular motion

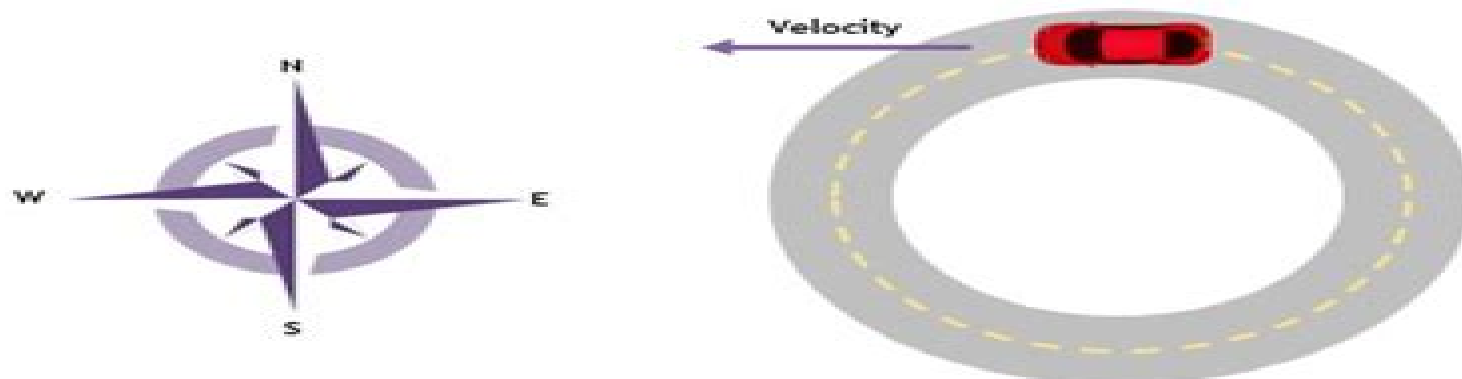

Velocity is speed in a certain direction.

Acceleration is a change in velocity.

Acceleration is always caused by a resultant force.

The acceleration is in the same direction as the resultant force.

The Sprig drives a car around the track below. He drives at a constant speed of 20m/s, travelling anti-clockwise. It takes him 20 seconds to complete one lap.

Draw the car after 10 seconds. Label it a.

Draw the car after 15 seconds. Label it b.

Add arrows showing the velocity of the car at a and b.

What is the velocity of the car after 10 seconds (speed and direction)?

What is the velocity of the car after 15 seconds?

Is the car accelerating? Give a reason.

Extension:

What would happen if the track was covered in ice or oil? What effect does ice/oil have on friction? What does this tell you?
