Step 1: Check for an Internet connection. Your Mac will use the connection that it finds first. If the network requires a password, plug in the essential device. If you're using an external keyboard and trackball or mouse, turn them on or plug them into your Mac. If you're using an external display, plug it in and turn it on as well, but don't connect the other peripherals. And, of course, plug in your Mac. If you've read a trackball before, hold it before holding a trackball. To lock down a trackball, tap on the trackball surface. Turn on your Mac. When the computer starts, the computer will start up. Use the setup assistant. A series of windows will guide you through the setup. If you've used a Mac before, you can skip some steps. Use the Mac ID on your Mac. We recommend that you use the Mac ID to turn on FileVault, iCloud Keychain, and Find My Mac. You can also let the Mac use information from your computer's Time Machine backup to help you get started. You'll be asked to create a new user account for your computer. You'll need to provide information to log in to your Mac. Some certain things you'll need to install software. Check for software updates. When the setup is finished, you'll see the Finder window. The desktop will appear. Click the Store icon in the Dock at the bottom of your screen. The Mac will check for updates. After your software is updated, you can connect your printers and other peripherals. Plug in your Mac. Make sure your Mac is connected to the Internet. Check the software settings and power. Install all available updates on both Mac computers. Install any updates for your third-party apps. Make sure that your Mac has a minimum of 8GB of RAM. Check the System Preferences. Check the Network settings. Connect the computers to each other. If both computers are using OS Server, make sure that they are near each other and have Wi-Fi turned on. If they're using OS Server, connect them to the same network using Wi-Fi or Ethernet. Or, connect them using a network cable. Then start up your old Mac in target disk mode. Or, connect your new Mac to a Time Machine backup of your old Mac. Use the Migration Assistant. On your new Mac, open the Migration Assistant. It will find the old Mac. Select the data you want to transfer. Select the data you want to transfer from a Time Machine backup. Startup disk. Click the Startup disk icon. On your old Mac, open the Migration Assistant. It will find the new Mac. Select the data you want to transfer. Select the data you want to transfer from a Time Machine backup. Open Migration Assistant.
