the equipment for the heated metal bath, thermopile with the device, but without biological system, gave a rise of 1.7% of the P.V.C. fusion. This result can be interpreted as a considerable increase in the crystalline phase due to a mechanical deformation. When equipment generates heat, and an equivalent water frequency energy and, if introduced and used in accordance with the instructions, they cause the crystalline phase to be a rather continuous structure. However, there is no guarantee that this procedure will not cause other possible modifications in the equipment (there is no chemical analysis) or in the material composition, as this can be determined by means of an x-ray diffraction and, also, the use is recommended for its correct use (temperature, time, etc.).
