Abstract

Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported depression and anxiety among a sample of young adults in the United States. Methods: Data were obtained from the 2004 National Survey of Adolescent Health, a nationally representative survey of 10,000 young adults aged 18–24 years. Results: The prevalence of self-reported depression was 12.5% and the prevalence of self-reported anxiety was 15.5%. The prevalence of both depression and anxiety was 8.5%. The prevalence of depression and anxiety was higher among females than males, and higher among those with a history of mental health problems than those without. Conclusion: The prevalence of self-reported depression and anxiety among young adults in the United States is high. Further research is needed to determine the causes of these problems and to develop effective interventions.
