QUESTION I have a 1994 Ford Taurus with 100,000 miles. The car has been running fine for the last 10 years. Recently, I noticed a small amount of oil leaking from the front of the engine. I checked the oil level and it was low. I added oil and the leak stopped. However, the leak started again a few days later. I checked the oil level and it was low again. I added oil and the leak stopped. This has happened several times now. I am concerned that there is a problem with the engine. Can you help me?

ANSWER It sounds like you are experiencing a common problem with older engines. The oil leak is likely coming from the front of the engine, where the oil pump and the oil filter are located. The oil pump is responsible for circulating oil throughout the engine, and the oil filter is responsible for filtering out any contaminants. If either of these components is leaking, it can cause an oil leak. To diagnose the problem, you should check the oil pump and the oil filter. If they are both in good condition, the leak is likely coming from the front of the engine. You should have a mechanic inspect the engine to determine the cause of the leak and make the necessary repairs.
