• For the "Cables Required" chart that appears with the diagram to determine which cables you'll need, see step 2 to provide extra accessories, such as cables and adapters, depending on the components you plan to connect.

• Turn off and unplug all components before making connections. If you are connecting a digital cable box, you'll need a special for-directional splitter that's compatible with your cable box. Contact your cable provider.

Making Video Connections

Your TV includes several types of video inputs. Use the inputs that are available on your components that provide the best video performance, as described in step 2.

Component video	• Best video quality
S-Video	• Best video quality
Composite video	• Best video quality
RF input	• Best video quality

Additional Connections

The best video performance comes from your digital video components using either digital optical or digital coaxial video connections. Depending on which components are in your system, you may need to complete additional connections. For example, if you have a satellite receiver, you'll need to connect the satellite receiver. If you have an A/V receiver, you'll need to connect speakers.

Note

The receiver's program logic will prevent the use of connections that allow signals to travel back through the system as TV signals or vice versa. Examples include using an RF signal to connect a video source to a video monitor.

Activating CableCARD™ Service

Before you use the Digital Audio™ service, you need to turn the CableCARD™ supplied by your cable provider on and activate the service, as described in step 3.

Note

Turning the CableCARD™ service on may require a password change on your card and on the TV.
