Review of Load Rating and Posting Procedures and Requirements Mark Bowen, Raymond Chou, 2014-12-31 All states are required to load rate and post bridges in order to comply with federal standards. Load ratings are performed in order to determine the safe live load capacity of a bridge considering the existing conditions of the bridge. Based on the load ratings, the bridge is evaluated for load posting or strengthening. The Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) was notified that their practice for load rating and posting did not satisfy 23 CFR 650.313. The purpose of this study was to summarize and compare load rating and posting procedures used in other states and to provide recommendations and information necessary to modify the load rating and posting procedures in INDOT's Bridge Inspection Manual, Part 3, Load Rating, in order to satisfy 23 CFR 650.313. In order to understand how load rating and posting is performed in other states, department of transportation (DOT) manuals were examined, questionnaires were sent to states, and additional states of interest were surveyed. The American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO) The Manual for Bridge Evaluation, Second Edition, which is the current specification for load rating and posting bridges, was reviewed, as well as older AASHTO bridge evaluation manuals. Based on this information, revisions were proposed to the INDOT Bridge Inspection Manual, Part 3, Load Rating, in order to eliminate current deficiencies.

Reliability-based Condition Assessment of Existing Highway Bridges Naiyu Wang, 2010 Condition assessment and safety verification of existing bridges and decisions as to whether bridge posting is required are addressed through analysis load testing or a combination of methods Bridge rating through structural analysis is by far the most common procedure for rating existing bridges The American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials AASHTO Manual for Bridge Evaluation MBE First Edition permits bridge capacity ratings to be determined through allowable stress rating ASR load factor rating LFR or load and resistance factor rating LRFR the latter method is keyed to the AASHTO LRFD Bridge Design Specifications which is reliability based and has been required for the design of new bridges built with federal findings since October 2007 A survey of current bridge rating practices in the United States has revealed that these three methods may lead to different ratings and posting limits for the same bridge a situation that carries serious implications with regard to the safety of the public and the economic well being of communities that may be affected by bridge postings or closures To address this issue a research program has been conducted with the overall objective of providing recommendations for improving the process by which the condition of existing bridge structures is assessed This research required a coordinated program of load testing and finite element analysis of selected bridges in the State of Georgia to gain perspectives on the behavior of older bridges under various load conditions Structural system reliability assessments of these bridges were conducted and bridge fragilities were developed for purposes of comparison with component reliability benchmarks for new bridges A reliability based bridge rating framework was developed along with a series of recommended improvements to the current bridge rating methods which facilitate the incorporation of various in situ conditions of existing bridges into the bridge rating process at both component and system levels This framework permits bridge ratings to be conducted at three levels of increasing complexity to achieve the performance objectives expressed in the terms of reliability that are embedded in the LRFR option of the AASHTO Manual of Bridge Evaluation This research was sponsored by the Georgia Department of

Transportation and has led to a set of Recommended Guidelines for Condition Assessment and Evaluation of Existing Bridges in Georgia
