Modeling Individual Differences in Perceptual Decision Making Joseph W. Houpt, Cheng-Ta Yang, James T. Townsend, 2017-01-18 To deal with the abundant amount of information in the environment in order to achieve our goals human beings adopt a strategy to accumulate some information and filter out other information to ultimately make decisions Since the development of cognitive science in the 1960s researchers have been interested in understanding how human beings process and accumulate information for decision making Researchers have conducted extensive behavioral studies and applied a wide range of modeling tools to study human behavior in simple detection tasks and two choice decision tasks e g discrimination classification In general researchers often assume that the manner in which information is processed for decision making is invariant across individuals given a particular experimental context Independent variables including speed accuracy instructions stimulus properties i e intensity and characteristics of the participants i e aging cognitive ability are assumed to affect the parameters in a model i e speed of information accumulation response bias but not the way that participants process information e g the order of information processing Given these assumptions much modeling has been accomplished based on the grouped data rather than the individual data However a growing number of studies have demonstrated that there were individual differences in the perceptual decision process In the same task context different groups of the participants may process information in different manners The capacity and architecture of the decision mechanism were found to vary across individuals implying that humans decision strategies can vary depending on the context to maximize their performance In this special issue we focused on a particular subset of cognitive models particularly accumulator models multinomial processing trees and systems factorial technology SFT as applied to perceptual decision making The motivation for the focus on perceptual decision making is threefold Empirical studies of perception have grown out of a history of making a large number of observations for each individual so as to achieve precise estimates of each individual s performance This type of data rather than a small number of observations per individual is most amenable to achieving precision in individual level and group level cognitive modeling Second the interaction between the acquisition of perceptual information and the decisions based on that information to the extent that those processes are distinguishable offers rich data for scientific exploration Finally there is an increasing interest in the practical application of individual variation in perceptual ability whether to inform perceptual training and expertise or to guide personnel decisions Although these practical applications are beyond the scope of this issue we hope that the research presented herein may serve as the foundation for future endeavors in that domain

The Informal Economy in Global Perspective Abel Polese, Colin C. Williams, Ioana A. Horodnic, Predrag Bejakovic, 2017-04-18 This book critically engages with how formal and informal mechanisms of governance are used across the world Specifically it analyzes how the governance mechanisms of formal institutions are questioned challenged and renegotiated through informal institutions Whilst there is an emerging body of scholarship focusing on informal practices this is scattered across a number of disciplines This edited collection by contrast fosters a dialogue on these issues moving away from monodisciplinary and normative methodologies that view informal institutions and practices simply as temporary economic phenomena In doing so the authors provide a wider understanding of how governance is composed of both the formal and the informal which complement each other but are also constantly in competition This novel approach will appeal to social scientists economists policy makers practitioners and anyone else willing to widen their understanding of how governance works

Diseases ,2017-07 Reading Prehistoric Human Tracks Andreas Pastoors,Tilman Lenssen-Erz,2021-02-26 This Open Access book explains that after long periods of prehistoric research in which the importance of the archaeological as well as the natural context of rock art has been constantly underestimated research has now begun to take this context into focus for documentation analysis interpretation and understanding Human footprints are prominent among the long time under researched features of the context in caves with rock art In order to compensate for this neglect an innovative research program has been established several years ago that focuses on the merging of indigenous knowledge and western archaeological science for the benefit of both sides The book gathers first the methodological diversity in the analysis of human tracks Here major representatives of anthropological statistical and traditional approaches feature the multi layered methods available for the analysis of human tracks Second it compiles case studies from around the globe of prehistoric human tracks For the first time the most important sites which have been found worldwide are published in a single publication The third focus of this book is on firsthand experiences of researchers with indigenous tracking experts from around the globe expounding on how archaeological science can benefit from the ancestral knowledge This book will be of interest to professional archaeologists graduate students ecologists cultural anthropologists and laypeople especially those focussing on hunting gathering and pastoralist communities and who appreciate indigenous knowledge Policing and

Mental Health John McDaniel,Kate Moss,Ken Pease,2020-02-25 This book explores the relationship between policing and mental health Police services around the world are innovating at pace in order to develop solutions to the problems presented and popular models are being shared internationally Nevertheless disparities and perceptions of unfairness remain commonplace Innovations remain poorly funded and largely unproven Drawing together the insights of eminent academics in the UK the US Australia and South Africa the edited collection evaluates the condition of mental health and policing as an interlocked policy area uncovering and addressing a number of key issues which are shaping police responses to mental health Due to a relative lack of academic texts pertaining to developments in England and Wales the volume contains a distinct section on relevant policies and practices It also includes sections on US and Australian approaches focusing on Crisis Intervention Teams CITs Mental Health Intervention Teams MHITs stressors and innovations from Boston in the US to

Queensland in Australia Written in a clear and direct style this book will appeal to students and scholars in policing criminology sociology mental health cultural studies social theory and those interested in learning about the condition and trajectory of police responses to mental health Geopolitical Risks in Financial Reporting and Transfer Pricing Anatol Melega,2025-03-04 This book explores the impact of geopolitical changes on financial reporting transfer pricing and foreign investment flows It focuses on how geopolitical instability affects companies in emerging and developing economies highlighting shifts in international reporting and risk management The main objectives are to analyze transformations in the internationalization of business assess the impact of accounting information on investment attraction and evaluate tax policies In the context of a changing geopolitical environment and the rise of economic multipolarity particularly with a focus on BRICS economies the book addresses the strategic adaptations needed in financial reporting and compliance Offering an in depth perspective on the complexity and interconnectedness of today s risks this book is an essential guide for scholars and financial professionals navigating the global economic landscape Racial Nationalisms Sivamohan Valluvan, Virinder S. Kalra,2020-12-17 This book addresses the centrality of race and racism in consolidating the nationalisms currently prominent in Brexit Britain Particular attention is given to the issues of refugees borders and bordering and the wider forms of nativist and anti Muslim sentiments that anchor today s increasingly populist forms of nationalist politics It is argued that the forms of scapegoating and alarmism integral to the revival of nationalism in British politics are fundamentally tied to racialised processes Equally however it is argued that such a political climate is not simply discursive but also yields acute forms of governance wherein an increasingly violent attention is given by the state to the border The chapters in the book do however also attempt to think through the possibilities of a constructive response to this moment Emphasis is given here to the everyday cultural textures that might help shape a popular opposition to racial nationalism Similarly the book attempts to unpack the appeal of today s distinctive populism in ways that might be more responsive to anti racist and anti nationalist sentiments Racial Nationalisms will be of interest to academics and researchers studying postcolonialism nationalism ethnic and racial studies and to advanced students of sociology political science and public policy This book was originally published as a special issue of the journal Ethnic and Racial Studies
