Realigning International Trade Negotiation Asymmetry Ms. Olajumoke Omoniyi Oduwole, 2011 Recently it has become apparent to developing countries in the WTO that their limited bargaining power has in fact been a stumbling block to obtaining desired negotiation outcomes in the multilateral trade system Thus to execute any fundamental changes to the status quo there was a need to cluster together pool resources and form alliances to leverage their collective strength in the negotiations What remained unclear however was what role this increased coalition activity by developing countries

played in the current WTO negotiations process Therefore the primary purpose of this dissertation is to describe how this shift toward coalitions as a negotiation strategy by developing countries occurred and to consider the possible implications of this coalition strategy for the future of the multilateral trading system Due to the complexity of the Doha Round I restricted my area of study to the Doha Round agriculture negotiations as a single case study since agriculture is the undisputed locomotive of the Round having set the tone for the majority of the negotiations Using qualitative data I captured a contextual description of four developing country agriculture coalitions Cotton 4 G 20 G 33 and G 90 as nested cases throughout the agriculture negotiation process from March 2003 to March 2010 I described the function of developing country coalitions in the negotiations by comparing and contrasting aspects of each coalition s negotiation strategy or tactics during the research study period In sum I investigate my preliminary assessment of the reason coalition strategy emerged as the dominant negotiation tool for developing countries in this particular WTO Round I then describe how these coalitions maneuvered in the ongoing negotiations during the study period At the end of my descriptive comparative analysis I was able to explain the significance of coalitions as a strategic tool for developing countries in WTO trade rules negotiations as well as assess the specific role that each of the four case study coalitions have played in the negotiation process In conclusion the study highlights some of the lessons learned from developing country coalition strategy in this Round The information derived could serve as a platform for further research in this area and eventually explain the raison d tre behind the negotiated outcomes

Strengthening Argentina's Integration into the Global Economy Martha Martínez Licetti, Mariana Iooty, Tanja Goodwin, José Signoret, 2018-05-14 Integration into global markets can improve the efficiency of the Argentinian economy providing opportunities for private investment to flourish and for the associated benefits to accrue to consumers Among many policies that are important for integrating into the global economy particularly relevant are trade investment and competition policies They all share a common attribute the capacity to shape the incentives of firms to improve resource allocation and to strengthen productivity while integrating into international markets Once properly combined investment trade and competition policies have mutually reinforcing relationships in the sense that growth dividends stemming from reforms in one policy area are reinforced when properly combined with reforms in the other two Against this backdrop this report follows a three pronged approach It presents a set of robust empirical analyses drawing from both general and partial equilibrium exercises to assess the potential impacts from trade competition and investment policy reforms It offers a new comparative review of international experience with structural microeconomic reform programs to bring insights for Argentina s design and sequencing of such reforms Finally it presents individual reform recommendations for each institution in charge of the three respective policy areas in an integrated step by step framework from the firm perspective to illustrate the critical challenges to investment and internationalization for Argentinian firms
