Teaching Tips and Strategies

Today's students use technology in ways that were not even dreamed of just a few years ago. Because these students have grown surrounded by various forms of technology, it has become an integral part of their lives. Unfortunately, many of these same students seldom think about the whys and wherefores behind the technologies they use every day.

I have found students often fail to recognize, understand or even see how information technology impacts them, their lives and even the careers they seek. So it is important to let them know what is in it for them, even if they are not majoring in Information Systems or Computer Science. The textbook's authors do a good job of explaining this by including a "What's In IT For Me?" section in each chapter.

Throughout this course, it is important for us, their instructors, to encourage our students to step back and observe the bigger picture as to what comprises the fundamentals of Information Systems. Unfortunately, if you have not found out already, you will find a few students who will think this class is boring or even complain they already "know it all."

Point out to them that they should look at the "What's In IT For Me?" section of each of the chapters. This should be done early in the course. As part of your course introductions on the first day of class, you might consider asking students what their major course of study is. Knowing each student's major and possible career goals will help you tailor examples, classroom assignments and discussion to the interests of the students.

Explaining how MIS has affected businesses as well as workers alike helps to get students interested in this class. It also helps students to understand the importance when they are told stories of how computers have evolved and how MIS and Knowledge Management (discussed in a late chapter) have made management decision-making easier and more reliable.

When I teach the course, to help support class discussions, I try to bring in examples from the local area. Most communities around college and university campuses have businesses or government agencies that operate data centers. Many times, students are unaware that they are there. In most cases, the local Chamber of Commerce or, if your school has one, a group of
