Projection Displays Matthew S. Brennessoltz, Edward H. Stupp, 2008-09-15 Projection is a technology for generating large, high-resolution images at a price point end users can afford. This allows it to be used in a wide variety of large-screen markets such as television and cinema. In addition, there are emerging small-screen markets where a pocketable, miniaturized projector can display images from mobile information devices such as smart phones or portable media players. Fully revised, this second edition of Projection Displays provides up-to-date coverage of the optical and mechanical systems in electronic projection displays. It takes into account major new developments in the many technologies needed to manufacture a projector display system. It presents a comprehensive review of projector architectures, systems, components, and devices. Key new and updated features include new material on light sources for projection displays, updated information on the human factors of projection displays, including color gamuts, resolution, and speckle coverage of new image-generating systems, including LCOS and scanned laser systems, up-to-date information on front and rear projection screens, practical examples of projection display applications, models for predicting the performance of optical and mechanical systems. This book is aimed at practicing engineers and researchers involved in the research, development, design, and manufacture of projection displays. It includes key aspects from the many technologies contributing to projection systems, such as illumination sources, optical design, electronics, semiconductor design, microdisplay systems, and mechanical engineering. The book will also be of interest to graduate students taking courses in display technology and imaging science, as well as students of the many other engineering, physics, and optics disciplines that lead into the field of projection displays. The Society for Information Display (SID) is an international society which has the aim of encouraging the development of all aspects of the field of information display.
