Porter's study on the competitiveness of nations the same criterion holds even for the evaluation of entire countries and national economies. Despite the innumerable number of publications and recommendations on innovation, competitive innovativeness is still a rare competency. The latest publication of UNICE, the European Industry Organization representing 20 million large, midsize and small companies, speaks a clear language: Europe qualifies to roughly 60%–70% of the innovation strength of the US and Japan. The record unemployment in many EU countries does not contradict this message. A main reason may be given by the fact that becoming an innovative organization means increased openness towards the new and more tolerance towards risks and failures, both challenging the inherently difficult management art of cultural change. Further, lacking innovativeness is often related to legal and fiscal barriers which rather hinder than foster innovative activities. Yet another reason to explain Europe's notorious innovation gap refers to insufficient financial R & D resources on the company as well as on the national level. As a result, for example, high ranking decisions on the level of the European Commission are taken to increase R & D expenditures in the European Union from roughly 2% to 3% of GNP.

Locating Global Advantage Martin Kenney, 2004
This volume explores how industries organize their global operations through case studies of seven manufacturing industries. The chapters provide a nuanced understanding of the complex matrix of factor costs, access to inimitable capabilities and time-based pressures that influence where firms decide to locate particular segments of the value chain.

Outside the Wire Kevin Patterson, Jane Warren, 2010-06-25
A remarkable collection of first-hand accounts written by soldiers, doctors and aid workers on the front lines of Canada's war in Afghanistan. Visceral, intimate and captivating in ways no other telling could be, Outside the Wire features nearly two dozen stories by Canadians on the front lines in Afghanistan, including the previously unpublished letters home of Captain Nichola Goddard, the first female NATO soldier killed in combat, and an introductory reflection by Romeo Dallaire. Collected here are stories of battle and the more subtle engagements of this little understood war: the tearful farewells, the shock of immersion into a culture that has been at war for thirty years, looking at a suicide bomber in the eye the moment before he strikes, grappling with mortality in the Kandahar Field Hospital and the unexpected humour that leavens life in a warzone. Throughout each piece, the passion of those engaged in rebuilding this shattered country shines through a glimmer of optimism and determination so rare in multinational military actions and so particularly Canadian. In Outside the Wire, award-winning author Kevin Patterson and co-editor Jane Warren have rediscovered the valour and horror of sacrifice in this definitive account of the modern Canadian experience of war.
