the Greek letter π is always used to indicate the proportion of the circumference of a circle to its diameter π therefore is always in formulas equal to π . The most commonly used Greek letters besides π are α , β and γ . Knowledge of algebra is not necessary in order to make possible the successful use of formulas for the solving of problems such as occur in the solution of triangles but a thorough understanding of the rules and processes of arithmetic is very essential. The symbols or letters used in the formulas simply stand in place of the actual figures or numerical values which are inserted in the formula in each specific case according to the requirements of the problem to be solved. When these values are inserted the result required may be obtained by simple arithmetical processes.
