

Mid-term Exam Study Guide
HIST 103: Foundations of America
Spring 2024
Value: 200 points (20% of final grade)

The mid-term exam will be administered in class on Wednesday, February 28. I will bring blue books for you to use to write your exam. There will be two parts of the exam. The first will ask you to write an essay answering one of the questions listed below. On the day of the exam, I will select one of these questions. You will answer it in a well-written, well-organized essay that uses an abundance of information from assigned readings, lectures, and discussions to support your answer. The purpose of giving you this list of potential questions is to focus your study, help you prepare, and write a good essay. The second part of the exam will be a list of seven terms (important concepts, people, events, documents) covered in readings, lectures, and discussions. You will select five of these and write a paragraph on each, defining the item and discussing its significance. Each section will be worth 100 points.

Potential Essay Questions

1. Compare and contrast the founding and development of the Massachusetts Bay colony with the Virginia colony during the 17th century (1600s); consider religion, economic systems, relations with Native Americans, ethnic composition, population growth, and class structure in your answer. By 1700, which colony was more successful? Explain why?
2. Why did colonies like Virginia, Maryland, and South Carolina develop a strong demand for unfree labor while demand was weaker in New York and Pennsylvania and much weaker in New England? What were the most important sources of unfree labor in the 17th century? How and why did that change after 1700? When and why did enslaved Africans become the largest group of unfree labor?
3. A variety of cultures came together in the English North American colonies between 1607 and 1776: Native Americans, Africans, English, Germans, French, Spanish, and Scots-Irish. How did these groups and interactions among them influence the development of English North America? How did these interactions affect members of these groups? When Jefferson asserted in the Declaration of Independence that "all men are created equal and endowed with certain unalienable rights," was he describing American society? Explain.
4. Looking at American society in 1800, explain the social, economic, political, military, and legal factors that placed Native Americans and African Americans in a position subordinate to (i.e., subject to control by) Whites and describe the ways in which they were subject to White domination. Were there events or historical developments that offered opportunities for Native Americans and African Americans to challenge their subordination. If there were, what were they and how effective were these in giving Blacks and/or Native American greater rights?
