

Things aren't good, they're great. So great in fact that everyone is getting along much better these days, for the most part at least. It seems like people have really figured this whole “living life” thing out. Make a ton of money, stay perfectly healthy, overindulge in things that make you happy, and throw wild parties every weekend. Everyone is much more comfortable gathering again now the Black Plague is old news. People actually have so much money to throw around, that they are quick to carelessly overspend and flourish in luxuries that previous civilizations couldn't. The best part? Your pockets are also full. What will you do with yours?

The End Of Utopia Part 1 The Search For Eden:

Nature Swapped and Nature Lost Elia Apostolopoulou, 2020-06-23 This book unravels the profound implications of biodiversity offsetting for nature society relationships and its links to environmental and social inequality Drawing on people's resistance against its implementation in several urban and rural places across England it explores how the production of equivalent natures the core promise of offsetting reframes socionatures both discursively and materially transforming places and livelihoods The book draws on theories and concepts from human geography political ecology and Marxist political economy and aims to shift the trajectory of the current literature on the interplay between offsetting urbanization and the neoliberal reconstruction of conservation and planning policies in the era following the 2008 financial crash By shedding light on offsetting's contested geographies it offers a fundamental retheorization of offsetting capable of demonstrating how offsetting and more broadly revanchist neoliberal policies are increasingly used to support capitalist urban growth producing socially environmentally and geographically uneven outcomes Nature Swapped and Nature Lost brings forward an understanding of environmental politics as class politics and sees environmental justice as inextricably linked to social justice It effectively challenges the dystopia of offsetting's ahistorical and asocial non places and proposes a radically different pathway for gaining social control over the production of nature by linking struggles for the right to the city with struggles for the right to nature for all
