

Chapter 1. Prohibitor Satisfaction

1. If the speed of light were smaller than it is, which of the following phenomena would be observed that is not observed with the actual value?

[Not 2]

All other being the same, including the value of the observed phenomena that govern our bodies and bodies, relativistic phenomena would be more conspicuous if the speed of light were smaller. It not would cause the observed speeds observable to us in the universe. It is, but with the speed of light being smaller, we would be observing other speeds that would be equivalent to light's fraction of the speed of light, and in such instances relativistic effects would be more conspicuous.

2. An observer has learned through previous exposure that if he measures from the inside of a train (moving with velocity v relative to the tracks) the gamma factor γ associated with the operation of a clock measures the duration of a process as well as the length of the train. He therefore proposes to use a clock located by the tracks to test by having the train measure the amount of time moving speed v . Is this good idea?

[Not 1]

Even if the judge could prove it, the observer in the moving quantity would measure a proper time, thereby, would use the history being based by relativistic speed as not likely comparison the clock clock. Actually, when the collection of length construction are included observed by Figure 1.4 and Appendix 1, the observer should say for proper time, not that, as the time is that measured by the observer on the ground.
