Production of Goal-Directed Actions in the Context of Social and Object-Related Interactions Daniela Corbetta,Jacqueline

Fagard,2017-09-05 Since the discovery of mirror neurons the study of human infant goal directed actions and object manipulation has burgeoned into new and exciting research directions A number of infant studies have begun emphasizing the social context of action to understand what infants can infer when looking at others performing goal directed actions or manipulating objects Others have begun addressing how looking at actions in a social context or even simply looking at objects in the immediate environment influence the way infants learn to direct their own actions on objects Researchers have even begun investigating what aspects of goal directed actions and object manipulation infants imitate when such actions are being modeled by a social partner or they have been asking which cues infants use to predict others actions A growing understanding of how infants learn to reach perceive information for reaching and attend social cues for action has become central to many recent studies These new lines of investigation and others have benefited from the use of a broad range of new investigative techniques Eye tracking brains imaging techniques and new methodologies have been used to scrutinize how infants look process and use information to act themselves on objects and or the social world and to infer predict and recognize goal directed actions outcomes from others This Frontiers Research topic brings together empirical reports literature reviews and theory and hypothesis papers that tap into some of these exciting developmental questions about how infants perceive understand and perform goal directed actions broadly defined The papers included either stress the neural motor or perceptual aspects of infants behavior or any combination of those dimensions as related to the development of early cognitive understanding and performance of goal directed actions

Sea and Pacific Motor Boat ,1971 The Political Economy of Low Carbon Resilient Development Susannah Fisher,Neha Rai,2016-10-04 Over the last decade policies and financing decisions aiming to support low carbon resilient development within the least developed countries have been implemented across several regions Some governments are steered by international frameworks such as the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change UNFCCC while others take their own approach to planning and implementing climate resilient actions Within these diverse approaches however there are unspoken assumptions and normative assessments of what the solutions to climate change are who the most appropriate actors are and who should benefit from these actions This book examines the political economy dynamics or the underlying values knowledge discourses resources and power relationships behind decisions that support low carbon resilient development in the least developed countries While much has been written on the politics of climate change this book will focus on the political economy of national planning and the ways in which the least developed countries are moving from climate resilient planning to implementation The book will use empirical evidence of low carbon resilient development planning in four countries Bangladesh Ethiopia Rwanda and Nepal Different approaches to low carbon resilience are critically analysed based on detailed analysis of key policy areas This book will be of great interest to policy makers practitioners students and scholars of climate change and sustainable development
