Artificial General Intelligence 2008 P. Wang,B. Goertzel,S. Franklin,2008-02-18 The field of Artificial Intelligence AI was initially directly aimed at the construction of thinking machines that is computer systems with human like general intelligence But this task proved more difficult than expected As the years passed AI researchers gradually shifted focus to producing AI systems that intelligently approached specific tasks in relatively narrow domains In recent years however more and more AI researchers have recognized the necessity and the feasibility of returning to the original goal of the field

Increasingly there is a call to focus less on highly specialized narrow AI problem solving systems and more on confronting the difficult issues involved in creating human level intelligence and ultimately general intelligence that goes beyond the human level in various ways Artificial General Intelligence AGI as this renewed focus has come to be called attempts to study and reproduce intelligence as a whole in a domain independent way Encouraged by the recent success of several smaller scale AGI related meetings and special tracks at conferences the initiative to organize the very first international conference on AGI was taken with the goal to give researchers in the field an opportunity to present relevant research results and to exchange ideas on topics of common interest In this collection you will find the conference papers full length papers short position statements and also the papers presented in the post conference workshop on the sociocultural ethical and futurological implications of AGI

Simulation and Visualization on the Grid Björn Engquist,Lennart Johnsson,Michael Hammill,Faith Short,2012-12-06 It is now 30 years since the network for digital communication the ARPA net first came into operation Since the first experiments with sending electronic mail and performing file transfers the development of networks has been truly remarkable Today s Internet continues to develop at an exponential rate that even surpasses that of computing and storage technologies About five years after being commercialized it has become as pervasive as the tele phone had become 30 years after its initial deployment In the United States the size of the Internet industry already exceeds that of the auto industry which has been in existence for about 100 years The exponentially increasing capabilities of communication computing and storage systems is also reshaping the way science and engineering are pursued Large scale simulation studies in chemistry physics engineering and several other disciplines may now produce data sets of several terabytes or petabytes Similarly almost all measurements today produce data in digital form whether from collections of sensors three dimensional digital images or video These data sets often represent complex phenomena that require rich visualization capabilities and efficient data mining techniques to understand Furthermore the data may be produced and archived in several different locations and the analysis carried out by teams with members at several locations possibly distinct from those with significant storage computation or visualization facilities The emerging computational Grids enable the transparent use of remote instruments computational and data resources fractional vibrators and seven classes of fractionally damped Euler Bernoulli beams that play a major role in hull vibrations this book presents analytical formulas of all results with concise expressions and elementary functions that set it apart from other recondite studies The results show that equivalent mass or damping can be negative and depends on fractional orders Other key highlights of the book include a concise mathematical explanation of the Rayleigh damping assumption a novel description of the nonlinearity of fractional vibrations and a new concept of fractional motion offering exciting additions to the field of fractional vibrations This title will be a must read for students mathematicians physicists and engineers interested in vibration phenomena and novel vibration performances especially fractional vibrations
