Introduction

Upton Sinclair aims to describe capitalism's evil nature as dehumanizing, brutal, and destructive. The society in the book by Sinclair is similar to the jungle, where humans remind the wild animals who are ready to kill and eat each other to survive. The story is centered around the personality of Jurgis Rudkis, who immigrates to the United States from Lithuania to make his life better. The narration features his attempts to provide for the family and guarantee them a decent level of life, but these actions do not yield positive results. Sinclair states that the capitalistic economic order makes people struggle for survival and lose their morality, which makes it the most destructive thing in the contemporary world.

Discussion of the Novel

The author was inspired by the events from his life, which makes the story realistic. While residing in Chicago's meat-packing neighborhood, Sinclair conducted a study by looking into the employees' factories and homes. Based on his research, he created the fictional book "The Jungle," which tells about the Rudkis family, Lithuanian immigrants who moved into Chicago's Back of the Yards (Sinclair 7). The family arrived in the United States expecting a respectable existence but soon understood this dream was impossible. The main character, Jurgis, takes his beloved woman, her family, and his father to the United States for material well-being. They experience a series of disasters resulting from fraudulent loans, which causes them to become impoverished and force them out of the poor ghetto home they had planned to purchase.

Even moral people with positive motivation are forced by capitalism to become brutal, ruthless, and predatory if they want to live. For instance, when Jurgis comes to the United States for the first time, he tries to succeed as a trustworthy employee at the meat-packing facility. He begins drinking, abandons his remaining family, becomes involved in offenses, and works for the politicians he despises on the meat-packing

A Mirror in the Roadway Morris Dickstein, 2021-08-10 In a famous passage in The Red and the Black the French writer Stendhal described the novel as a mirror being carried along a roadway In the twentieth century this was derided as a naive notion of realism Instead modern writers experimented with creative forms of invention and dislocation Deconstructive theorists went even further questioning whether literature had any real reference to a world outside its own language while traditional historians challenged whether novels gave a trustworthy representation of history and society In this book Morris Dickstein reinterprets Stendhal's metaphor and tracks the different worlds of a wide array of twentieth century writers from realists like Theodore Dreiser Sinclair Lewis Edith Wharton and Willa Cather through modernists like Franz Kafka and Samuel Beckett to wildly inventive postwar writers like Saul Bellow Günter Grass Mary McCarthy George Orwell Philip Roth and Gabriel García Márquez Dickstein argues that fiction will always yield rich insight into its subject and that literature can also be a form of historical understanding Writers refract the world through their forms and sensibilities He shows how the work of these writers recaptures yet also transforms the life around them the world inside them and the universe of language and feeling they share with their readers Through lively and incisive essays directed to general readers as well as students of literature Dickstein redefines the literary landscape a landscape in which reading has for decades been devalued by society and distorted by theory Having begun with a reconsideration of realism the book concludes with several essays probing the strengths and limitations of a historical approach to literature and criticism

The Profits of Religion Upton Sinclair, 2005-11-01 It is not too much to say that today no daily newspaper in any large American city dares to attack the emoluments of the Catholic Church or to advocate restrictions upon the ecclesiastical machine from Holy History Few readers have not heard of Upton Sinclair's 1906 book The Jungle his fictionalized account of

Chicago's meatpacking industry which set in motion dramatic social and governmental changes and highlighted the power of investigative journalism But his 1918 book The Profits of Religion a viciously witty censure of religious institutions in America remains unjustly obscure Drolly but bitterly subtitled an essay in economic interpretation this potent book condemns religious leaders for taking advantage of the credulity and hopefulness of ordinary Americans to line their own pockets and amass political influence Not merely a brilliant work of persuasive journalism this is also a document of the idealistic socialism that lingered after World War I when the triumph of the movement's ideal still seemed possible American writer UPTON SINCLAIR 1878-1968 was an active socialist and contributor to many socialist publications His muckracking books include The Moneychangers 1908 King Coal 1917 Oil 1927 and Boston 1928 Unseen Upton Sinclair Upton Sinclair, 2009-08-24 Best known for his muckraking expose of the squalor and brutality that pervaded the livestock industry in his book The Jungle Upton Sinclair's political activism was not limited to issues of workers rights or workplace safety These nine short works never before published reveal an author who also wrestled with questions concerning women's independence and the state of the health care industry in America Always controversial Sinclair ranges here from the comic to the deadly serious while investigating issues that include artificial insemination and dietary measures A substantial biographical introduction gives new insights into Sinclair's concerns The Cambridge History of the American Essay Christy Wampole, Jason Childs, 2023-12-14 From the country's beginning essayists in the United States have used their prose to articulate the many ways their individuality has been shaped by the politics social life and culture of this place The Cambridge History of the American Essay offers the fullest account to date of this diverse and complex history From Puritan writings to essays by Indigenous authors from Transcendentalist and Pragmatist texts to Harlem Renaissance essays from New Criticism to New Journalism The story of the American essay is told here beginning in the early eighteenth century and ending with the vibrant heterogeneous scene of contemporary essayistic writing The essay in the US has taken many forms nature writing travel writing the genteel tradition literary criticism hybrid genres such as the essay film and the photo essay Across genres and identities this volume offers a stirring account of American essayism into the twenty first century
