J.D. Lifeline: A Law School Guide for the New Legal Economy (Pre-Law Edition) Zenovia N. Evans, 2010

Engines of Anxiety Wendy Nelson Espeland, Michael Sauder, Wendy Espeland, 2016-05-09 Students and the public routinely consult various published college rankings to assess the quality of colleges and universities and easily compare different schools However many institutions have responded to the rankings in ways that benefit neither the schools nor their students In Engines of Anxiety sociologists Wendy Espeland and Michael Sauder delve deep into the mechanisms of law school rankings which have become a top priority within legal education Based on a wealth of observational data and over 200 in depth interviews with law students university deans and other administrators they show how the scramble for high rankings has affected the missions and practices of many law schools. Engines of Anxiety tracks how rankings such as those published annually by the U.S. News World Report permeate every aspect of legal education beginning with the admissions process. The authors find that prospective law students not only rely heavily on such rankings to evaluate school quality but also internalize rankings as expressions of their own abilities and flaws. For example, they often view rejections from first tier schools as a sign of personal failure. The rankings also affect the decisions of admissions officers who try to balance admitting diverse classes with preserving the school's ranking which is dependent on factors such as the median LSAT score of the entering class. Espeland and Sauder find that law schools face pressure to admit applicants with high test scores over lower scoring candidates who possess other favorable credentials. Engines of Anxiety also reveals how rankings have influenced law schools' career service departments. Because graduates' job placements play a major role in the rankings, many institutions have shifted their career services resources toward tracking placements and away from counseling and network building. In turn, law firms regularly use school rankings to recruit and screen job candidates, perpetuating a cycle in which highly ranked schools enjoy increasing prestige. As a result, the rankings create and reinforce a rigid hierarchy that penalizes lower tier schools that do not conform to the restrictive standards used in the rankings. The authors show that as law schools compete to improve their rankings, their programs become more homogenized and less accessible to non-traditional students. The ranking system is considered a valuable resource for learning about more than 200 law schools. Yet Engines of Anxiety shows that the drive to increase a school's rankings has negative consequences for students, educators, and administrators and has implications for all educational programs that are quantified in similar ways.

Vanderbilt Law School Don Welch, 2008 The Law Department was one of two departments that opened for classes in the fall of 1874 in the newly founded Vanderbilt University The operation of the institution in the nineteenth century was governed by a quasi proprietary model which was abandoned in 1900 when the University made the school a more integral part of the academic enterprise The first half of the twentieth century was a struggle for survival The School faced a number of obstacles including the educational and cultural headwinds that all Southern educational institutions faced limited resources and a University hesitant to embrace national trends in legal education These realities resulted in the School's expulsion from the Association of American Law Schools in 1926 A renaissance of sorts began under Dean Earl C Arnold a few years later but was ultimately snuffed out by the Great Depression and then the onset of World War II The Law School's doors were closed in 1944 Vanderbilt Law School reopened in 1946 and John W Wade's twenty year deanship beginning in 1952 set the School on a new path While the institution's continued existence was no longer in doubt the School encountered new tensions and conflicts Vanderbilt became the first integrated Southern private law school in 1956 as part of a broader movement to diversify its faculty and student body The movement from regional to national aspirations created new fault lines among the School's constituencies as did the debate among the faculty over the relative priorities of teaching and research Throughout the century developments in the academic program reflected and contributed to the new modern understandings of legal education This history is based on interviews and extensive archival research in personal papers reports Board of Trust and faculty meeting minutes
