Affect and Emotion in Human-Computer Interaction Christian Peter, Russell Beale, 2008-08-25 Affect and emotion play an important role in our everyday lives. They are present whatever we do, wherever we are, and wherever we go without us being aware of them for much of the time. When it comes to interaction, be it with humans, technology, or humans via technology, we suddenly become more aware of emotion, either by seeing the other's emotional expression or by not getting an emotional response while anticipating one. Given this, it seems only sensible to explore affect and emotion in human-computer interaction to investigate the underlying principles, to study the role they play, to develop methods to quantify them, and to finally build applications that make use of them. This is the research field for which, over ten years ago, Rosalind Picard coined the phrase affective computing. The present book provides an account of the latest work on a variety of aspects related to affect and emotion in human-technology interaction. It covers theoretical issues, user experience, and design aspects, as well as sensing issues, and reports on a number of affective applications that have been developed in recent years.
