

Introduction
 The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of a new educational program on student performance. The study was conducted over a period of six months, involving a sample of 120 students from a local high school. The program was designed to improve students' understanding of mathematics and science through interactive learning and practical applications. The results of the study are presented in the following sections, showing a significant improvement in student performance after the program was implemented.

Methodology
 The study used a quasi-experimental design, comparing the performance of students who participated in the program (the experimental group) with those who did not (the control group). Data was collected through standardized tests and classroom observations. The analysis of the data revealed that the experimental group showed a higher level of achievement in both subjects compared to the control group.

Conclusion
 The findings of this study suggest that the new educational program is effective in enhancing student performance. The program's focus on interactive learning and practical applications appears to have a positive impact on students' understanding and retention of knowledge. Further research is needed to explore the long-term effects of the program and to identify the specific factors that contribute to its success.
