Introduction

[illegible][illegible]

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 10-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, and maximum power. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all three measurements at the end of the 10-week period compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

- Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, aged 40 to 50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group continued their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group participated in a supervised, structured exercise program consisting of aerobic and resistance training. HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The results showed that the training group experienced a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The average HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the average BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.
