The diagram illustrates a login process involving three participants: Customer, Admin, and Bank. The process begins with the Customer performing a self-message 'I login/register'. The Customer then sends a message 'I login/register' to the Bank. The Bank then sends a message 'I login/register' to the Admin. The Admin performs a self-message '(message)' and then sends a message 'No approval yet' back to the Bank. The Bank then performs another self-message '(message)' and sends another 'No approval yet' message back to the Admin. The diagram uses standard UML notation with lifelines, messages, and activation bars to show the sequence of interactions.
