Chernoff,2013-02-11 While living in West Africa in the 1970s John Chernoff recorded the stories of Hawa a spirited and brilliant but uneducated woman whose insistence on being respected and treated fairly propelled her ironically into a life of marginality and luck as an ashawo or bar girl Rejecting traditional marriage options and cut off from family support she is like many women in Africa who come to depend on the help they receive from one another from boyfriends and from the men they meet in bars and nightclubs Refusing to see herself as a victim Hawa embraces the freedom her lifestyle permits and seeks the broadest experience available to her In Hustling Is Not Stealing and its follow up Exchange Is Not Robbery a chronicle of exploitation is transformed by verbal art into an ebullient comedy In Hustling Is Not Stealing Hawa is a playful warrior struggling against circumstances in Ghana and Togo In Exchange Is Not Robbery Hawa returns to her native Burkina Faso where she achieves greater control over her life but faces new difficulties As a woman making sacrifices to live independently Hawa sees her own situation become more complex as she confronts an atmosphere in Burkina Faso that is in some ways more challenging than the one she left behind and the moral ambiguities of her life begin to intensify Combining elements of folklore and memoir Hawa's stories portray the diverse social landscape of West Africa Individually the anecdotes can be funny shocking or poignant assembled together they offer a sweeping critical and satirical vision

Asia, 1925 Legends and Romances of Brittany Lewis Spence, 1917 Journal of the American Asiatic Association, 1926 Privacy and Personality James Roland Pennock, John William Chapman, 2007-06-01 Like many concepts privacy has a commonly accepted core of meaning with an indefinite or variable periphery Some would wish to enlarge the core It would be pointless to attempt to establish a definition by way of introduction to a series of essays that themselves provide no single definition But the themes of freedom justice rational choice and community always seem to appear in any discussion of privacy Privacy is a penultimate good Perhaps in certain usages such as autonomy it is an ultimate good desirable for its own sake and grounded on nothing more final Of course the right of privacy may sometimes be asserted to conceal illegal or immoral acts When that occurs it appears to be put to an instrumental use But insofar as we justify such claims it is not because they prevent the detection of immorality or violations of the law Rather at least in the case of illegal acts it is because the means being challenged themselves violate privacy The individual control human dignity foundation for privacy is closely related to personality Privacy provides relief from tension and opportunity for the development of intimate relations with others All of us have standards of behavior that are higher than we can maintain at all times and these standards are widely shared in the society in which we live If we do not observe them we are likely to be criticized or we fear that we shall be and we suffer also from loss of self esteem Whether in some final sense the concept of privacy is culture bound is impossible to establish in the absence of any known society in which elements of privacy are not to be found J Roland Pennock was professor of political science at Swarthmore College for more than twenty five years as well as a fellow at the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation John W Chapman is professor emeritus of political science at the University of Pittsburgh
