University Of Durban 2015 Prospectus:

University Community Engagement and Lifelong Learning Julia Preece, 2017-07-13 This book offers a conceptual re think of how university community engagement functions as a lifelong learning resource for communities While having a specific focus on the South African context it has important implications for other universities which are concerned with their communities and makes a compelling argument for the university as a public good in spite of current trends towards marketization and commodification of higher education The book draws on a theoretical framework of capabilities asset based community development and the adult learning concept of dialogue to propose a model whereby the boundary walls of the university become metaphorically porous so that community members feel free to interact with the university as equal members of society A historical outline of African universities is provided as well as an exploration of the evolution of terms for community engagement service learning and learning cities and an examination of the policy and practice implications for the ideological model of a porous university

Andrew Butterworth, Mark P. Simmonds, 2017-08-15 Our relationships with marine mammals are complex. We have used them as resources and in some places this remains the case. Viewed them as competitors and culled them again. Ongoing in some localities been so captivated and intrigued by them that we have taken them into captivity for our entertainment and developed a lucrative eco tourism activity focused on them in many nations. When we first envisaged this special topic we had two overarching aims. Firstly we hoped to generate critical evaluation of some of our relationships with these animals. Secondly we hoped to attract knowledgeable commentators and experts who might not traditionally publish in the peer reviewed literature. We were also asking ourselves a question about what responsibility mankind might have to marine mammals on our rapidly changing planet. The answer to the question can or should humans have responsibility for the lives of marine mammals when they are affected by our activities is in our opinion yes and the logical progression from this question is to direct research and effort to understand and optimise the actions reactions and responses that mankind may be able to take We hope that the papers in this special issue bring some illumination to a small selection of topics under this much wider topic area and prove to be informative and stimulating The Global Coal Market Mark C. Thurber, Richard K. Morse, 2015-07-20 Coal has been the world's fastest growing energy source in absolute terms for over a decade Coal also emits more CO₂ than any other fossil fuel and contributes to serious air pollution problems in many regions of the world If we hope to satisfy the demand for affordable energy in emerging economies while protecting the environment we need to develop a keen understanding of the market that supplies coal This book offers an in depth analysis of the key producers and consumers that will most influence coal production transport and use in the future By exploring how countries such as China India Indonesia Australia and South Africa have developed their respective coal industries and how these industries link together through the international coal trade experts shed light on how the global coal market may evolve and the economic and environmental implications This book is the most comprehensive treatment of these topics to date and will appeal to a wide readership including scholars and practitioners working on energy economics and policy The Routledge
