QUESTION I have a 1997 Ford Taurus with 100,000 miles. The car has been in the shop several times for engine problems. The engine has been replaced twice. The first time it was replaced by a used engine, and the second time it was replaced by a new engine. The car has been in the shop for a total of about 10 weeks. I am considering selling the car, but I am not sure if it is worth the trouble. What do you think?

ANSWER It sounds like you have a car with a history of engine problems. If the engine has been replaced twice, it is likely that there is a serious issue with the engine. I would recommend that you have the car inspected by a qualified mechanic to determine the cause of the problem. If the problem is not serious, you may be able to fix it and keep the car. However, if the problem is serious, it may be worth considering selling the car. If you decide to sell the car, you should disclose the history of engine problems to the buyer. This will help the buyer make an informed decision about whether to buy the car.

QUESTION Which of the following is not a characteristic of the Staphylococcus aureus bacterium?
