

Access Control

Access control systems are designed to restrict entry to a building or area to authorized personnel only. These systems typically use a combination of physical barriers, such as doors and locks, and electronic components, such as card readers and access control units. The system is configured to allow entry to authorized personnel while denying entry to unauthorized personnel. Access control systems can be used to protect sensitive information, equipment, and facilities. They can also be used to track and monitor the movement of personnel within a facility. Access control systems are an essential component of any security program.
