

Is Social Media Good or Bad for Society

8 pages | 1960 words

The evolution of social media is one of the fastest growing phenomena of this generation. From sending text messages to liking, posting and sharing events on more advanced sites like Facebook, Twitter and Instagram. In recent years, the online world has been portrayed as toxic environment responsible for a global wave of depression, for crippling relationships and its negative effects on sleep. However, social media is not all bad news. There is so much more to the online world than the endless parade of Instagram-induced anxiety and insecurity. Social media is an accessible, cost-efficient tool that assists millions of people in their day-to-day lives. Many people contend that social media is a platform which provides active participants with the opportunity to connect with others, greater access to scholarship and career opportunities and to be informed about current issues and other important events in the political world. The writer of this essay, Alia Ah Far, did not pay attention to the power of social media until she realized how much iPhones and online social accounts have become a part of our daily lives and how they influence the way we live. Social media played a significant role in the writer's quest to find sport and university scholarships overseas as this process involved utilizing the internet and social media sites to search, locate and communicate universities and rugby coaches directly. The writer utilized social media sites such as Facebook, Twitter and Gmail to remain in contact with a US college Rugby coach at Lindenwood University who eventually provided her with an Academic and Rugby Scholarship offer. If social media did not exist, the writer would not have the scholarship opportunity she has today. Social media is powerful source of information that can be used for good. It important for people to understand the benefits of the online world and make the most of it. Social networking sites allow people to communicate and stay in contact with friends as well as meet new people from all around the world. For example, Facebook is a social networking site where people can post about their interests and hobbies and create relationships with like-minded people. In addition, friendship group chats can be formed to interact with people with similar interests and views. Social networking sites allows users to creatively express who they are by utilizing tools such as blogging and messaging to post ideas and stories. In many cases, social media users also tend to share poems, interest in music, Television shows, hobbies, photos, and many other things (Jasson). Social media improves communication and strengthens human connection. In a recent study, Teen social media users report that social media makes them feel better connected to their friends' feelings. In fact, more than eight-in-ten (83%) social media-using teens say social media makes them more connected to information about what is happening in their friends' lives and 70% say these social platforms better connect them to their friends' feelings (Pew Research Center). Social media makes it possible for everyone to find and communication with others who share the same interests and concerns regardless of culture, status or...
