

The background of the cover is a dark, textured surface, possibly water or a night sky, filled with numerous small, glowing particles. Scattered throughout are various human limbs and objects, including hands, arms, and legs, some of which appear to be floating or falling. A pair of green-rimmed glasses is visible in the upper right, and a pair of blue-rimmed glasses is in the lower right. The overall mood is mysterious and unsettling.

Can a person silence their conscience from the strange emotions that emerge when one sins? An examination of the original design of humanity in the imago Dei suggests one cannot sin and avoid the debilitating duo. Humanity is created to live within the moral structure established by God. Therefore, a violation of the divine laws, which is sin, leads to guilt and shame. The strange emotions were innate sensations imparted to humanity to stop rebellion against the moral laws and to compel an offender to acknowledge the offense through the confession of sin. Unconfessed sin debilitates the physical and mental functions of a person created in the image of God. Guilt and shame are the strange emotions that serve as mental guardians for an individual as well as for the society in general The duo was given as silent deterrents to immoral behaviors The ^AOxford Handbook of Media Psychology Karen E. the Benin Bronzes and a collection of paintings looted during the Holocaust that are now housed at the Serbian National Museum Subotic tells the story of these artworks how they were looted how they ended up on display in national museums and how the art restitution disputes have unfolded While these cases are different in terms of their historical context of looting and ownership claims the movements for their restitution and resistance to it illustrate the larger questions of how national cultural heritage is internationally constructed and how it serves states desire for international status and prestige An in depth and nuanced account of art restitution disputes The Art of Status illuminates the shifting political significance of art on the international stage from ownership to restitution The Reading Mind Daniel T.
