Mind the Gap Tobias Berg, 2016 We analyze pricing differences between U S and European syndicated loans over the 1992 2014 period We explicitly distinguish credit lines from term loans For credit lines U S borrowers pay significantly higher spreads but lower fees resulting in similar total costs of borrowing in both markets Credit line usage is more cyclical in the U S which provides a rationale for the pricing structure difference For term loans we analyze the channels of the cross country loan price differential and document the importance of the composition of term loan borrowers and the loan supply by institutional investors and foreign banks

Modeling Transition Probabilities for Loan States Using a Bayesian Hierarchical Model Rebecca Lee Monson, 2007 A Markov Chain model can be used to model loan defaults because loans move through delinquency states as the borrower fails to make monthly payments The transition matrix contains in each location a probability that a borrower in a given state one month moves to the possible delinquency states the next month In order to use this model it is necessary to know the transition probabilities which are unknown quantities A Bayesian hierarchical model is postulated because there may not be sufficient data for some rare transition probabilities Using a hierarchical model similarities between types or families of loans can be taken advantage of to improve estimation especially for those probabilities with little associated data The transition probabilities are estimated using MCMC and the Metropolis Hastings algorithm
