Brears,2017-01-17 In the 21st Century the world will see an unprecedented migration of people moving from rural to urban areas With global demand for water projected to outstrip supply in the coming decades cities will likely face water insecurity as a result of climate change and the various impacts of urbanisation. Traditionally urban water managers have relied on large scale supply side infrastructural projects to meet increased demands for water however these projects are environmentally economically and politically costly. Urban Water Security argues that cities need to transition from supply side to demand side management to achieve urban water security. This book provides readers with a series of in depth case studies of leading developed cities of differing climates incomes and lifestyles from around the world that have used demand management tools to modify the attitudes and behaviour of water users in an attempt to achieve urban water security. Urban Water Security will be of particular interest to town and regional planners water conservation managers and policymakers international companies and organisations with large water footprints environmental and water NGOs researchers graduate and undergraduate students.
