Social issues don't exist without the society, its cultural, ethical and moral boundaries. What is considered a social issue in one country or timeframe, maybe an absolutely mundane event in other. So every social issue research paper should start from explaining the cultural context where it happened.

If you want your research paper to be easily understandable, you may also take into consideration the cultural background of your audience (at least its majority). Will they understand the examples you provide or shall you add some more explanations just to make sure you are on the same page? Or, on the contrary, is your audience somehow connected to the social issue you want to study? If so, you should be especially careful with your research, so you won't offend them or trigger some unwanted memories.

The diversity of social issues allows the researchers to choose the ones that weren't studied before and apply the new approaches to those that were studied already. But to make your research paper really great you should carefully examine the previous researches regarding the social issue you want to study. Was there something you can use as a basis for your own research? Or do you see the "blind spot" you can fill with your paper, completing the picture?
