O. Griffiths, 1997 Anne Griffiths originally went to Botswana to establish a university course in family law But independent fieldwork in Botswana convinced her of the central role of the traditional customary legal system that stands alongside the colonial common law of courts and magistrates she was examining in her course In the first comparative work on these two systems Griffiths shows how the structure of both legal institutions is based on power and gender relations that heavily favor males Griffiths's analysis is based on careful observation of how people actually experience the law as well as the more standard tools of statutes and cases familiar to Western legal scholars She explains how women's access to law is determined by social relations over which they have little control In this powerful feminist critique of law and anthropology Griffiths shows how law and custom are inseparable for Kwena women Both colonial common law and customary law pose comparable and constant challenges to Kwena women's attempts to improve their positions in society Subject Catalog Library of Congress, 1982 Parliamentary Papers Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons, 1902 Human Rights and Choice in Poverty Alan G. Smith, 1997-08-30 This interdisciplinary study applies human rights theory to the problems of rural poverty in the Third World Considering the interdependence of minimal food and health security with minimal assurance of basic freedoms political scientist Alan G. Smith traces the linkage to the need of the food insecure to seek clientelistic dependencies on better off neighbors relationships that often operate to restrict freedom of choice In contrast to conventional rural development aid which can introduce new client dependency if pursued alone Smith stresses the need to find other forms of aid that would provide the option of assured minimal survival while avoiding the constraints imposed by dependency Arguing for bolstering bottom up human rights momentum he suggests the transfer of appropriate tools into the hands of the target group Recipients would make use of them to enhance autonomous food crop production thereby making client dependency a matter of choice rather than necessity Smith illustrates the Third World predicament of food insecurity leading to infringement of rights by drawing together empirical evidence from Bangladesh Botswana and Tanzania He further argues that respect for human rights involves a duty on the part of advantaged nations to address the Third World predicament with practical measures fully consistent with human rights and for each of these three country cases Smith recommends direct locally specific minimalist aid His model its practical illustration and recommendations should be valuable to academics and students in the fields of rural sociology anthropology and political science especially those focusing on human rights poverty and Third World development as well as bureaucrats and consultants in the development aid field Subject Catalog, 1981 Library of Congress, 1981 Shaping health policy Mark Exworthy, Stephen Peckham, Martin Powell, Alison Hann, 2011-10-28 This collection examines the role that case studies play in understanding and explaining British health policy Overall the chapters cover the key health policy literatures in terms of the policy process analytical frameworks and
