They might realize that it was impossible to launch a satellite from the Soviet Union. They might also learn about our satellite program, planned space and rocket technology, and other military plans.
3. Would anyone disagree with the deal?	Not many.	Some people in Congress and the public were opposed.
4. Would the deal achieve what it was intended to achieve?	Yes. The governments had agreed to suspend the prohibition on launching nuclear weapons.	The American public was convinced we would not take a decision like this.

2. Suppose the agreement simply set up the program, without these (other) provisions. What would
