some careful planning and thought exercised beforehand The Low Carb Diet Ron Kness, 2015-04-04 In my book The Low Carb Diet A Beginners Guide to Weight Loss Through Carbohydrate Management I reveal a successful method of losing weight based in part on the amount and type of carbohydrates you consume We often hear about low carb diets and how successful they prove to be in losing weight but what exactly is a low carb diet The term low carb means low in carbohydrate Carbohydrates are usually found in foods like pasta potatoes fruit bread and rice A low carb diet does not entail any specific diet nor does it include well defined steps to losing weight It is a rather loose term that varies according to the person who uses it Some common features though include consuming foods that are low in carbohydrates and low on the Glycemic Index which I will cover later in this book The consumption of carbohydrates leads the body to excrete insulin which is the body's function for energy As carbohydrates get digested glucose the effect of insulin excretion either gets burned by our body if we need immediate energy or else gets stored as fat After consuming a meal that consists mainly of carbohydrates the level of insulin in our body goes suddenly up and after a short time suddenly down the rush and then the crash as it is called This effect causes us to be hungry only after 2 or 3 hours from our last meal leading us to a vicious circle of being hungry then eating only to be hungry again a short while later Finally in the end we store the excess energy as fat The main ways to define a low carb diet following the initial question What Is A Low carb Diet is to clarify whether you are talking about the actual carbohydrate that an adult consumes daily or about the percentage of the calories in a person's diet that comes from carbohydrates The usual amount of carbohydrate calories that are allowed in an adult's diet is about 50-60% of their total daily caloric intake So any percentage of calories coming from carbohydrates that is below that can be thought of as low carb For the carbs they do consume on a low carb diet the daily total intake is usually limited to anywhere from 60-130 grams or 240-520 calories When compared to governmental dietary guidelines which typically recommend consuming 225-325 grams 900-1300 calories of carbs per day you can see how low a low carb diet actually is When the amount of carbs you eat is reduced theories say that your insulin levels will be better maintained as a result How so When you eat carbs especially simple carbs your body breaks them down into sugars that hit your bloodstream When your body experiences a sugar rush it signals the release of insulin Once insulin is released glucose receives a cue to enter the cells in the body Glucose is used first and foremost for energy but when it's present in excess it's stored to be used later or is turned into fat By reducing the amount of sugars carbs you put into your body your insulin levels have a better chance of staying somewhat level and not experiencing spiking When reduced carbs happen over period of time it can lead to ketosis a condition in which your body uses fat as energy instead of carbs More commonly referred to as the Keto diet this is low carb dieting on steroids This can cause serious fat loss and is the main reason why living a low carb lifestyle has been popular Carb Crash: The Ultimate Guide to Low-Carb Diets Shu Chen Hou, Are you tired of fad diets that promise quick results but leave you feeling hungry and unsatisfied Say goodbye to the endless cycle of weight loss and gain and say hello to a sustainable life changing
