John Simpson is a broker who always puts the interests of his clients as his first consideration when recommending an investment. He specializes in safe conservative investments. John is engaged in a constant battle with the Branch Manager because the manager wants him to increase his commissions at his clients expense. But John will not bend his principle of putting the clients interests first. Despite the obstacles he becomes a top producing broker. Joe Dunigan is a broker that believes that commissions always come first. He does whatever is needed to maximize commissions without regard for the best interests of the client. He likes to trade high risk investments such as options because it generates more commissions. A dramatic change in his life forces him to reconsider his investment philosophy. Mike Rabinovitz is the Branch Manager. His only interest is the bottom line or branch profitability. He does not seem to care about the interests of the clients or the interests of the brokers. He constantly puts pressure on the brokers to increase commissions. As a result he has a high turnover rate among the brokers. Do you ever feel tired of everyone wanting your money? Do you ever get frustrated from sorting through the many charity letters requesting you for more money? Do you ever wonder if your donation really helps? If you answer yes, then you know the burdens that come from giving. Whether it is a small grassroots nonprofit in your hometown or national appeals on television to dial in your donation, then you understand that it takes wisdom and discernment to give responsibly. In today's world, the centrality of philanthropy is money, and specifically your money is wanted. But what nonprofits need is not more money, but leadership. Philanthropic leadership is the tipping point if you are going to make a difference. Rather than raising more money, nonprofits need for you to rise up and lead. A philanthropic leader understands that money cannot and has not solved the world's gravest problems within the developing world, nor does it create sustainability. Yes, money pays bills and produces salaries, but at the end of the day, nonprofits need you and your leadership more than they need your money. In Everyone Wants Your Money, Dr. Keller draws from his own experience of giving millions of dollars to charities to working alongside competencies The best leaders are learners and they can't achieve mastery until and unless they truly decide that inside them there is a person who can make a difference and learn to be a better leader than they are right now. Aspire to Excel To become an exemplary leader, people must determine what they care most about and why they want to lead. Leaders with values-based motivations are the most likely to excel. They also must have a clear image of the kind of leader they want to be in the future and the legacy they want to leave for others. Challenge Yourself Challenging oneself is critical to learning leadership. Leaders must seek new experiences and test themselves. There will be inevitable setbacks and failures along the way that require curiosity, grit, courage, and resilience to persist in learning and becoming the best. Engage Support One can't lead alone and one can't learn alone. It is essential to get support and coaching on the path to achieving excellence. Whether it's family managers at work or professional coaches, leaders need the advice, feedback, care, and support of others. Practice Deliberately No one gets better at anything without continuous practice. Exemplary leaders spend more time practicing than ordinary leaders. Simply being in the role of a leader is insufficient. To achieve mastery, leaders must set improvement goals, participate in designed learning experiences, ask for feedback, and get coaching. They also put in the time every day and make learning leadership a daily habit. Kouzes and Posner offer unrivaled insights into what it means to become an exemplary leader in today's world with their original research and over 30 years of experience studying the practices of extraordinary leadership. They show that anyone can become a better leader if they believe in themselves, aspire to excel, challenge themselves to grow, engage the support of others, and practice deliberately. Learning Leadership challenges readers to do the meaningful and disciplined work necessary to becoming the best they can using a new mindset and toolkit that can make extraordinary things happen. It's not the once-in-a-while transformational acts that demonstrate leadership. It's the little things that one does day in and day out that pave the path to greatness.
