Metastases determine malignancy The main attention so far has been focused upon organ metastases The molecular mechanisms thereof while far from being totally elucidated are increasingly well understood Modern diagnostic tools now enable detection and precise localization of small lesions In contrast our knowl edge and diagnostic capabilities regarding metastatic spread to the lymphatic system are rather limited However there have re cently been a number of interesting advances It is the aim of this volume to submit these developments to detailed analysis The therapeutic relevance of enhanced sensitivity in detection of lymph node metastases has to be considered in the light of in creased morbidity versus eventual prognostic improvements by modification of therapy An interesting concept which might im prove diagnostic accuracy while reducing operative morbidity is the sentinel node technique Surgical standards are lacking however and many fundamental questions pertaining to precise lymphatic mapping remain unanswered Whether the sentinel node concept is of general relevance or whether it is applicable in only a few organs remains to be determined This book offers intensive discussion of the concept from methodological and tu mor biological viewpoints World renowned experts with long term involvement in related basic and clinical research provide the reader with a broad survey of actual knowledge together with a critical appraisal of recent and future developments We sincerely hope this book succeeds in providing an outlook as a reference for all clinicians on future prospects and serving and researchers in this extremely important field New Technologies in Surgical Oncology Antonio Mussa,2009-12-08

Antonella Fioravanti, Francesco Dotta, Antonio Giordano, Luigi Pirtoli, 2020-06-18 MicroRNAs miRNAs are small noncoding RNAs that are 19-24 nucleotides in length following maturation. Recent evidence has demonstrated their key role as post-transcriptional regulators of gene expression through the binding of specific sequences within target messenger RNA (mRNA). miRNAs are involved in the synthesis of a very large number of proteins and it is speculated that they could regulate up to 30% of the human genome. They control virtually every cellular process and are essential for animal development, cell differentiation and homeostasis. Altered miRNA expression has been linked to such pathological events as inflammatory, degenerative or autoimmune processes and have been associated with several diseases including cancer, cardiovascular diseases, diabetes mellitus and rheumatic and neurological disorders. Recently miRNAs have been found in many different biological fluids and this observation suggests the potential of miRNAs as new candidate biomarkers for diagnosis, classification, prognosis and responsiveness in the treatment of different pathological conditions. Furthermore, the development of therapeutic strategies that involve either restoring or repressing miRNAs expression and activity has attracted much attention. Significant progress has been made in the systems for delivery of miRNAs even if substantial improvements in this area are still necessary. Although they have been extensively studied, a number of interesting questions regarding the physiological and pathological role of miRNAs have been postulated and their potential diagnostic and therapeutic role remain yet unanswered. Reactive oxygen species (ROS) are free radical-containing oxygen molecules derived from cellular oxidative metabolism including enzyme activities and mitochondrial respiration and play a pivotal role in many cellular functions. Whereas ROS are essential for normal cellular processes, their aberrant production or failure of the capacity to scavenge excessive ROS induces an altered redox status with excessive synthesis of free radicals leading to an imbalance in the redox environment of the cell. The loss of normal ROS levels causes lipid, protein and DNA damage which contribute to the development of various pathologies including neurological disorders, rheumatic and cardiovascular diseases, diabetes and cancer. Increasing evidence highlights that there is crosstalk between miRNAs and components of redox signaling even if this complex and the characteristics of mutual interaction need to be amply elucidated. Hence both miRNAs and oxidative stress are involved in the multifactorial development and progression of acute and chronic diseases by influencing numerous signaling and metabolic pathways. The Special Issue entitled "Crosstalk between MicroRNA and Oxidative Stress in Physiology and Pathology" of the International Journal of Molecular Sciences includes original articles and reviews that provide new insights into the interaction between miRNAs and oxidative stress under normal and pathological conditions which can assist in the development of new therapeutic strategies. Finally, I would like to thank all the authors for their excellent contribution. I hope this Special Issue will provide readers with updated knowledge about the role of miRNAs and oxidative stress in physiology and pathology.
