Local girl plans walk across Sahara Desert

By July this year, Sarah White, from here in Gerrards Cross, ¹will have finished / will be finishing her A-level exams, but she ²won't have relaxed / won't be relaxing on a beach somewhere to celebrate. Sarah and two friends ³will be walking / walk across the Sahara Desert!

People ⁴leave / will have left water and food at different places along the girls' route, but they ⁵will still be carrying / will still have carried 25 kilograms of food, water and equipment on their backs every day. It will be too hot for Sarah and her friends to walk in the middle of the day, so they ⁶get / will be getting up early in the morning to walk before it gets too hot. Then they'll rest in their tents until the evening.

'Our bodies ⁷will have got used / get used to the high temperatures by then,' Sarah says, 'because we'll stay near the Sahara for a few weeks before we start the trip. But I ⁸doubt / 'm fairly sure it will be very comfortable to sit inside a tent in temperatures of 45°C! And lots of things ⁹could / may not go wrong too. Strong winds ¹⁰will have / may come in from the Atlantic and blow sand around. This is called a "sand storm", and if one ¹¹happen / happens on our trip, we ¹²aren't / won't be able to see anything – or go outside our tents for days!

Software Engineering with Computational Intelligence Taghi M. Khoshgoftaar, 2012-12-06 The constantly evolving technological infrastructure of the modern world presents a great challenge of developing software systems with increasing size complexity and functionality The software engineering field has seen changes and innovations to meet these and other continuously growing challenges by developing and implementing useful software engineering methodologies Among the more recent advances are those made in the context of software portability formal verification techniques software measurement and software reuse However despite the introduction of some important and useful paradigms in the software engineering discipline their technological transfer on a larger scale has been extremely gradual and limited For example many software development organizations may not have a well defined software assurance team which can be considered as a key ingredient in the development of a high quality and dependable software product Recently the software engineering field has observed an increased integration or fusion with the computational intelligence CI field which is comprised of primarily the mature technologies of fuzzy logic neural networks genetic algorithms genetic programming and rough sets Hybrid systems that combine two or more of these individual technologies are also categorized under the CI umbrella Software engineering is unlike the other well founded engineering disciplines primarily due to its human component designers developers testers etc factor The highly non mechanical and intuitive nature of the human factor characterizes many of the problems associated with software engineering including those observed in development effort estimation software quality and reliability prediction software design and software testing
