Green,2013-12-05 Based on more than a decade of research in Palikur lands known as Arukwa in the state of Amap Brazil Knowing the Day Knowing the World reconsiders the dialogue between formal scholarship and Amerindian ways of knowing Beginning and ending with a public archaeology project in the region the book engages head on with Amerindian ways of thinking about space time and personhood Demonstrating that Palikur knowledges are based on movement and a careful theorization of what it means to be present in a place the book makes a sustained case for engaging with different ways of knowing It shows how this kind of research can generate rich dialogues about nature reality and the ethical production of knowledge The structure of the book reflects a gradual comprehension of Palikur ways of knowing during the course of field research The text enters into the ethnographic material from the perspective of familiar disciplines history geography astronomy geometry and philosophy and explores the junctures in which conventional disciplinary frameworks cannot adequately convey Palikur understandings Beginning with reflections on questions of personhood ethics and ethnicity the authors rethink assumptions about history and geography They learn and recount an alternative way of thinking about astronomy from the Palikur astronomical narratives and they show how topological concepts embedded in everyday Palikur speech extend to different ways of conceptualizing landscape In conclusion they reflect on the challenges of comprehending alternative cosmologies and consider the insights that come from allowing ethnographic material to pose questions of modernist frameworks BBC Music Magazine ,2006
